from the dean

As I come to the end of my term as Dean, it is appropriate to make some comment not only about the students currently in the Faculty, especially those about to graduate, but also about those who have come and gone over the past five years.

By and large, they have been a splendid collection of individuals, full of enterprise and endeavour, eager to learn and to put what they have learned into effect. Their presence here has made the building come alive and fulfil its purpose, as a centre for legal activity. I am sure that they will always regard the Law Centre not only with pride but also with affection — as the place where they were able to gain some insight into the complexities and beauty of the law, and where they began their never-ending education in one of the most testing and vital of all intellectual disciplines. I can only hope that what we have been able to do for them in the Faculty will ultimately prove to be for their benefit and for that of all with whom they come into contact in future years.

Whatever the future may hold for them, I wish them all the best of good fortune in all their endeavours.

Yours sincerely,

G. H. L. Fridman,
Dean of Law.

"You see how easy it is to be completely wrong about a simple matter. It was always my conviction — or better, my impression that the legal system was designed to arrive at the truth in matters of human and property relationships. You see, I had forgotten or never considered one thing. Each side wants to win, and that factor warps any original intent to the extent that the objective truth of the matter disappears in emphasis.

The Law Club

The University of Alberta

message from the president

The 1974-75 year saw many changes in the structure and activities of the Law Club, or more accurately, the U. of A. Law Students' Association. We were fortunate in succeeding in most of what we set out to do. Probably the event which occurred most lasting in character would be our incorporation as a society — thus enabling us to change administrations with some semblance of order and precedent.

The format of our social program was widened in an attempt to appeal to as many facets of our school as possible. The Friday socials contributed greatly to this goal. The Children's Christmas Party is another example of a different philosophy from past years. Not a radically altered one but simply a broader one. We believed that the Law Club could do much more than it had done in the past and proceeded from that premise.

Future executives will develop their own ideas and policies. This is essential in order that the club adapt to changes. We hope that even in some small way our efforts this year will serve as an example of some of the things we can do for ourselves if we set our minds on it. I would urge future club members to seek out improvements. Communicate with other law schools and observe their organizations and methods. Be flexible and willing to try new ideas. And above all, welcome change.

To the graduands may I wish you the best of luck in your careers. To the returning students, hang in there because the end is well in sight and remember to support your local law club.

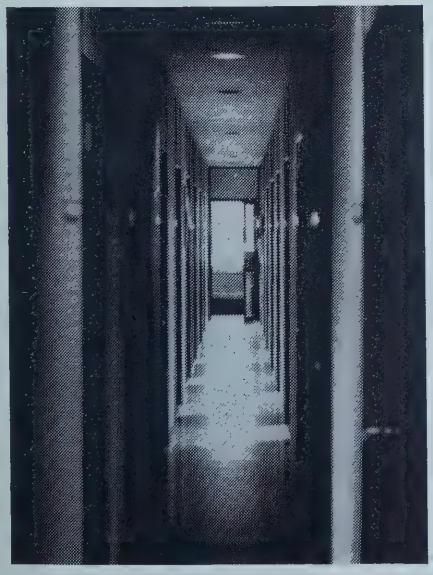
Student Legal Services takes up the spare time of about 150-175 students in this Faculty. It is a volunteer, non-credit program where students do something for nothing. Student Legal Services is presently deeply involved in three areas of the law: casework, preventative legal services and law reform.

About 100 students, this year were involved in what is commonly called casework. In this area, students working out of one of the offices, S.U.B., Dickensfield, West 10 and Boyle Street, agree to help clients who call in with legal or legally related problem. Students accept cases only in certain areas not covered by the Alberta Legal Aid Plan and only where the client is unable to afford the services of a real lawyer. As a result of the latter requirement, I will not list the addresses and telephone numbers of the respective offices in case any of the readers get into trouble.

In the area of preventative legal services, SLS has published a few booklets and pamphlets to help the layman help himself. As well, we have taken some positive steps in planning and carrying out educational programs in numerous city schools. Students are often asked to partake in seminars or panel discussions by community organizations throughout the city. Presently, SLS is engaging in attempts to organize a provincial legal educational resource centre, which would operate from the law school. Case and seminar work are concentrated in the areas of landlord-tenant law, criminal law (including narcotic matters and Highway Traffic matters), wills, domestic relations, immigration and welfare rights. This list is, of course, not exhaustive.

Law students must always freely voice their discontent about some of our unjust laws and inequalities. John Faulkner has recently undertaken an extensive research project in co-operation with the Alberta Legal Aid Plan to restructure and revise the existing system of dispensing legal aid to the province. Other members of SLS are working on such projects as: a lay advocate training program, equality in the transportation systems for the handicapped, participation at the Edmonton Women's Place, working towards equality for women, and others.

The most important idea I can set across in this short article is that Student Legal Services is only a fractional part of the total legal system. By itself it can do little in the above areas compared to what needs to be done. I therefore extend to all lawyers and future lawyers an invitation to take an active part in making our laws operate in the most just and equitable way possible.



Just a note to caseworkers

If, upon reading this, you remember that you have a file or two that has not been signed by your supervising lawyer — please get it done A.S.A.P. (as soon as possible) and return it to the Project Director of your respective Project.

men's intramurals

The Law Unit, for the fourth consecutive year, captured top honors in the Men's Intramural program with 3,569 points. As well, Ian MacLachlan won the award for the Intramural Athlete of the Year by participating in 21 sports events during the school year. Ian also won, along with Peter Semonick, the trophy for Law's Intramural Athlete of the Year, which was presented at the Formal Stag.

Law Unit members won individual championships in archery (Class B), golf, handball, racquetball, snooker and volleyball (Division II). In addition, the Unit won unit crests for basketball, golf and freethrow, bowling, golf, handball, racquetball, snooker and squash.

The unit managers, Don McCrimmon and Bruce Millar wish to thank all of the 297 men who participated in the 1974-75 season and predict that Law will continue to dominate the Men's Intramural program next year.

women's intramurals

This past year has produced many lasting memories for those who participated in the intramural program and our own organized (?) events. More girls participated than ever before and we achieved our highest number of points to date, finishing in tenth place.

As to our own events, I am sure all the players will remember those wild and wacky games: on the football field against Mercury MacInnes and his motley crew . . . and on the ice against Percy and his pals. I know that all the girls hope that these Challenge Cup games will continue, since they were great fun for the participants and spectators — not to mention the after-game parties.

As well, we would like to congratulate Val Kordyban, winner of our Jockette Award, for her outstanding contribution in so many intramural events this past year.
